INTRODUCING A NEW SUPPLEMENT: COMPARATIVE TRUST STATISTICS

As the realty trust industry grows, so does the need for more comprehensive comparative data. To fill this vital need, REALTY TRUST REVIEW with this issue commences publication of a four-page statistical supplement covering 85 major real estate investment trusts, generally trusts with over 500,000 shares outstanding and $10 million in assets. This month's supplement continues the basic data we have been providing to subscribers: month-ending price, percentage change, price/earnings ratios and estimated dividend yields.

Next month, however, we will go computer--equipment deliverers willing. Since the first of the year we have spent considerable time and effort in developing a computer program that will make possible a major addition to the body of comparative statistics we will present on these 85 trusts. The coming issue will contain three new statistics by which investors can compare realty trusts. The trio:

1. Ratio of price to book value. Since a trust's future growth potential is intimately bound up with the relationship of current market price to book value, this ratio will be computed for each issue.
2. Return on book value. The computer will relate annualized earnings per share to book value per share to derive a measure of internal return. For this calculation we will be using earnings and book value per share assuming full conversion of all convertible securities. This relationship will provide a significant measure of the relative efficiency of funds employed in the trust. We will use primary (i.e., undiluted) earnings per share and book value per share for trusts with only warrants outstanding. We have concluded that the methods for adjusting for potential dilution from warrants for trusts prescribed by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants present an unrealistic picture of trust operations. Accordingly, book values and earnings have been adjusted to reflect full conversion of subordinated debt but not for warrant exercise.
3. Total Market value. As trust trading volume grows--listed trusts account for about $6 million in turnover weekly now--market value of individual issues becomes of increasing importance, especially to institutional portfolio managers. Market value in millions of dollars will thus be a regular feature.

Faster and more frequent delivery. Readers will be receiving all this on a more timely basis, since the computer will permit us to shorten the time between pricing and delivery to you. And within a short time we hope to announce capability to deliver these statistics to you on a weekly basis if you desire.

The cost-surprisingly low. Less than a year ago, REALTY TRUST REVIEW began as a four-page service. As the industry grew, so did we, first to six pages, then to eight, and finally to this month's 12 pages. Our rubber band simply won't stretch any more and accordingly the annual subscription rate on REALTY TRUST REVIEW must advance to $84 annually on April 1. We have spared no effort in preparing this expanded statistical service for you and believe it will rapidly pay for itself by aiding you in making accurate and rapid comparisons of trust securities.
